Dedication

This, the first edition of the St. Clairian is dedicated with pride to Miss Eileen McDonald, the head of our Commercial department. Miss McDonald has taught for many years and has the honour of having taught in all four secondary schools in Sarnia. Throughout her teaching career she has given freely of her time and energy. Her fund of knowledge, the warmth of her personality and the depth of her understanding have made her admired and respected by the thousands of young men and women whom she has taught.

Editorial

This first year of St. Clair's existence has already been an eventful one. Without the willingness of the students and the guidance of our capable staff, it would not have been possible.

In September, many of the students (excluding that group of distinction known as grade nine), were not very enthused about leaving their old school and friends to readjust to a new school referred to as "that place out in the sticks." It was up to us to establish St. Clair's reputation and traditions by breaking former ties, and convince ourselves that St. Clair would be the best school in Sarnia. Soon the little clans of Northern, S.C.I.T.S., Central, and St. Pat's students vanished and formed one student body whose school spirit and hard work have brought us well on the way to the city-wide fame Mr. Wood predicted right from the start.

Although our school didn't quite take first place in athletic competitions, all team members deserve a lot of praise for the time and effort they put into their games. In spite of the fact that the basket-ball players had not played together as a team in previous years, the Juniors defeated St. Pats 39-26, 44-33, 35-33, Northern 41-27, 32-26, and S.C.I.T.S. 37-33. The Bantams non-chalantly won all their games against Northern and Central except one. The Junior Soccer team played some closely contested games when they defeated S.C.I.T.S. 2-1, and tied 1-1, Central 1-0, 2-1 and Northern 1-0 and a 1-1 tie. The Senior Soccer team was not as victorious as the Juniors but was successful in winning over Central 1-0 and tying S.C.I.T.S. 0-0. The soccer players spent hours struggling valiantly on the farm yard north of the school, which was by no means the ideal practice-field. If our lawn is not used for a drag-strip anymore, they should be able to play on our own campus soon. Keep up the good work as you're getting in shape to win the City Championship next season.

The variety of school organizations have made it possible for every student to participate in something of interest. This both benefits the student and contributes to the school. Those with special talents put on an excellent Variety Show before an audience which filled the auditorium and left many standing. The money raised at this function will be used for bursaries and awards for academic standing, and also to buy uniforms for our cheerleading squad. Mrs. Winter and Mr. Wilson did much to contribute to the success of the show.

A major project which involves the entire school is the newly established award system. It will give recognition to students outstanding in the academic field as well as sports and extra-curricular activities. Let's see lots of honour pins and school letters worn in the near future.

We extend our congratulations to the students who have represented our school and brought it recognition. Two good examples are the speaking contest and the Science Fair.

The "St. Clairian" is another example of combined effort by the students, for the students, as it records the 1961-1962 school year. As editor I would like to thank everyone on the magazine staff for their assistance in this publication and Mr. Campbell, our staff advisor, for his valuable help as we encountered numerous problems. I would also like to thank the Drafting Department, the English Department, Mr. Wood for his behind the scenes advice. Mr. Hill for his pictures and the many students who also contributed pictures.

I have mentioned only a few of the achievements every St. Clair student can be proud of. Let us not be too easily satisfied, but as we come here to prepare for future careers, broaden our outlook, and become more intelligent (if at all possible, we would strive for higher goals and live up to our motto, "Inter Primos Esse" or, to be among the foremost.

ADRIAN AMBACHTSHEER,
Editor.

Principal's Remarks

Our school motto is "Inter primos esse" — "To be among the foremost." In the years ahead it is my sincere wish that you will always strive to live up to this concept. At no time should you be satisfied with anything but your best. Each of you has played a part in the founding of a new school. During the past year you have helped build the base on which the traditions and the philosophy of St. Clair will rise. The part that each has played will determine the type of super-structure that pupils will erect in the years ahead. The accomplishments of a school are a reflection of the thinking, the willingness to work and the perseverance of its pupils. A student body with the desire, "To be among the foremost" can reach any heights it wishes. Are you aiming high enough?

THE JOURNEY

A smooth pebble on the beach—
From whence did it come?
Far from the lands across the sea,
A place of mystery and intrigue,
Maybe a spot of quiet beauty and peace,
Perhaps from a rushing, whirling torrent,
Or a tumbling, laughing stream?
So strange to think how far its journey,
Until it comes to rest at last,
A smooth pebble on the beach.

NATURE

I know a place where wild flowers grow,
And where tall grasses in the breeze blow.
The brook nearby flows through the countryside,
And ocean waves flow in the morning tide.
Here, by night there is a magic spell;
And fairies dance to the sound of a bell.
The moon above casts a tranquil light,
Which shines upon fairies in the night.
Then all the wonder of God's earth appears.
And grows and grows with the coming years.

GOD'S CREATIONS

We thank thee dear Lord
For this beautiful land.
We know it is wrought
By Thy wonderful hand.

The hills and the valleys,
The mountains and the plains,
The lakes and the rivers,
The sweet shady lanes.

The beautiful flowers,
The wonderful trees,
The birds in the branches,
That sway in the breeze.

The sunrise and sunset,
The bright sky above,
They all seem to tell,
Of God's wonderful love.

The cattle in the field
That so peacefully graze.
The bright rippling streams,
Seem to sing out thy praise.

Oh may we be thankful
To Thee every day,
In thought, word and action
To Thee Lord we pray.

THE WHIRLWIND

Who is this busy, hurried man?
He's after every Rick and Dan
To make them work a little more
And wear their brains down to the core.

We've got him walking up the wall.
He's running up and down the hall.
He has to keep on moving fast
How will this whirlwind ever last?

He buzzes all around the school
To make sure all the kids don't fool,
He has to make us all be good
His name, of course, is Mr. Wood.

THE CLOCK

I wish a genius would invent
A clock to slowly creep,
When it is near the rising hour
And I prefer to sleep.
Then when I'm in school, I wish
That same old clock would race,
Right up to the luncheon hour
And then, would slow its pace.
Then when my homework is all done,
And stations come in clear,
I wish, I wish it would detour
Until the bedtime hour is near.

ST. CLAIR

St. Clair so new,
So large, so strong,
Stands for right,
Fights all wrong.

Teaches the things
We all should know,
So we'll be able
To hoe life's row.

There it stands
For all to see,
St. Clair the school,
For you, and me.

It gives the chance
For us to heed
Some vital lessons,
We all do need.

Teaches us trades
That later will pay
For all the work
We do today.

Teaches the way
To always be
Happy, honest,
Trouble free.

Your kind teachers
So bright, and strong,
Praise the right,
Punish the wrong.

All their lessons
We heed as would
Loyal students
The way we should.

So St. Clair
TO THEE I write,
Of how you stand
For all that's right.

And thanks to THEE
For the chance you give
To me, and to all
A full life to live.

NATURE

I know of a trail where animals run,
From the dawn of day until the setting sun,
To end this beauty would be a shame,
But the time, the hour, move on just the same.
The highways and byways spring up each day
Adding to the scenery along the way.
As the towns and cities expand and grow,
The forest will diminish this I know.
The future will come upon us at last
And the forest will be gone — a thing of the past.

SNOWFLAKES

Quietly and silently they fall,
Over the trees and over the walls;
White and fluffy, soft as down,
Dressing the earth in a shimmering gown.

Covering the earth in a coat of white,
Lighting the darkness of the night;
One after another, what a picture they make—
Each tiny segment a fluffy "Snowflake."

HOW TO ESCAPE GETTING A HOMEWORK SLIP

Occasionally some of us do not seem to have our homework done when we arrive in class. Of course this is no fault of the pupil but if he gets caught the teacher usually doesn't accept some of the perfectly logical excuses such as, "I left my book at school," or "I thought I had it done," or "I forgot." These excuses are "almost" always true but the teachers think that we are just trying to cover up our laziness. In the following paragraph I would like to explain some of the methods I would use to escape from receiving the fatal homework slip.

First of all, you must APPEAR as if you have your homework done. This is most important. There are several ways of accomplishing this but the one I find most successful is to get to class ahead of time and read your textbook and then when the teacher is asking questions be ready with plenty of answers. This way it not only appears to the teacher that you have done your work but he or she is also led to believe you studied it earnestly. If the teacher begins checking the notes turn to another section of your book and begin to write as fast as you can. While doing this have a deep look of concentration on your face. By using this method the teacher will not want to interrupt you for fear that if the mood is broken you may resort to talking or some other form of mischief. This method is especially good for those who talk a lot in class. If none of the above appeals to you, the following may be tried. By simply saying "I have it done but I left my book at home," you may escape the homework slip. To further emphasize this it is wise not to bring the textbook to class.

It takes a certain amount of practice to choose the correct method of escape but after a while it comes naturally. Of course, the only really fool-proof method and the one I find most successful, is to complete the homework. By doing this how can a teacher possibly give you a homework slip?

HORIZONS BEYOND

A new and exciting period in the history of the world has begun. It promises to be more amazing than any period thus far. This is the era of space travel.

Over the centuries, courageous pioneers have crossed the deserts and the mountain ranges of the world. Daring adventurers have reached the north and south poles, climbed Mt. Everest, explored the dense jungles of Africa and ascended into the stratosphere in balloons.

O CANADA

I have dedicated this poem to my Mother and Father on their becoming Canadian citizens on October 1, 1958.

O Canada I love thee true and fair,
Thy riches and beauty are everywhere.
A nation still young and only beginning.
But her wise decisions are always winning.

A nation stood by in triumph, or disaster.
But only with thee O Master.
A nation strong from east to west
A nation at peace but never at rest.

The riches and beauty spread before our eyes,
The hills, mountains, the valleys and skies,
All this and more for a nation free,
For this, O Lord, we thank Thee.

With cities and industries yet expanding,
With engineers working and forever planning.
In the future, yes, we'll have hardships to bear,
But these as one must willingly share.

The animals, fowl, and land unexplored
For this we thank thee, Almighty Lord.
Canada's people number many yet few,
But remember, one of these people is you!

Hans R. Devos 10D

This is the past. We now must look forward to what lies ahead. In the future we will conquer the moon, Mars, Venus, and other galaxies. There was once a poem written called "High Flight," That which faces us today is even a higher flight, a flight into the unknown.

For a moment, think how many advances have been made since that cold December morning when Orville and Wilbur Wright flew the first powered, man-carrying airplane. Now planes cross the continent in two hours.

Yes, now more than ever before, we have much to look forward to in the field of explorations of outer space.

ST. CLAIR'S BRIEF HISTORY

September fifth, nineteen sixty-one will always be remembered in the life of St. Clair Secondary School, for it was then that the school was first opened for classes. The previous year the land which now contains the school building and grounds was covered with trees. Many people worked to their limit to make ready for the school. The trees had to be removed and the structure erected. As time went on it was argued that it was impossible to finish it before September.

Then the impossible became possible. The school was finished in time. Today it stands complete with over seven hundred students to fill it. Even now authorities are planning to put an addition on it. What it will be like in ten years, only time can tell.

ST. CLAIR SPIRIT

Can school be more than working and studying? I asked myself this question many times. Then the answer came in a true, clear way. "It can if you go to St. Clair," and I have just reason for saying so.

The last afternoon before the 1961 Christmas holidays, St. Clair's teaching staff performed a variety of skits for the amusement of the students. This impressed me as real school spirit, the spirit every member of St. Clair should have. Work is still work, but with spirit there is pleasure; with pleasure, there is ambition. Yes, there is more at St. Clair than just work.

BLAST OFF

It was 1984. The United States were preparing to send out the second expedition of colonists to the moon.

As I stood inside looking through the window of the rocket, I heard the count-down, and before I could say "Cape Canaveral's Done It Again," I was hundreds of miles from the earth.

Looking back, I was awed at what I saw. I felt sure that if every person was able to see the wonder and beauty of our earth from high in space, that all our petty racial prejudices, and government revolts would cease. We would become brothers, regardless of race, creed, or colour. We would live together peacefully, thankful for all the blessings around us.

SCHOOL

A school is a beacon of hope in an endless sea of ignorance. Every student should consider the right to learn one of life's most sacred privileges. Life is too short to throw it away by ignoring education.

When a young student plods lazily and unwillingly to school early in the morning, he has no thoughts for the future. Every day, his chances of success are dwindling. No longer can a barefoot boy of sixteen wave goodbye to the "little red schoolhouse" and make his fortune in the world. A University education is almost a must in this world of ours.

Be happy and content to be able to learn, and exercise your ability to the utmost.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE

As I stood looking down at the two tombstones before me, memories of my dead parents passed through my mind. They had been beneath those granite markers for more than five years now, but their images in my mind were as clear as if it were yesterday.

I remembered them as two very happy people, always kind and understanding in all matters except one. Each of my parents had his own idea about what I must be when I grew up. My mother always said I should be a doctor. A doctor was a person every one looked up to with respect, she often said. My father, however, had a different idea for my future. He said I should be a diplomat, for a diplomat was a man chosen for his ability alone. For as long as I can remember, this conflict had hovered over our happiness like a black cloud.

I knew that some day I would have to decide what I was going to do and that this decision would greatly affect the relationship of our family. When I graduated into high school, I had to decide which courses to take in order to prepare myself for college. To satisfy both my parents, I took subjects which would enable me to enter either field.

My years in high school were very happy ones except for the realization that I would have to choose when I graduated. I thought of many things to do but none of them would satisfy both my parents and myself at the same time. Graduation loomed nearer and nearer and finally was upon us. I passed with top honours in my class and this of course made my parents very proud and each more determined than ever that I should be what he wanted.

Fortunately for me, something happened which postponed my decision even longer. I was drafted. Although I was not particularly interested in the army at that time, it provided a means of escape from that dark cloud still hanging over me.

Soon after joining the army, I had to pick my branch of the service. Deciding to see what medicine was really like, I chose the Medical Corps. After a few months, I found that both medicine and the army gave me a great sense of satisfaction and accomplishment. I knew at that time that there could be no two ways about it; this was my life and I must live it the way I thought best no matter what my parents thought.

As I walked towards the front door of my home, I wondered how my parents would take the news and what they would say. I didn't have to wait long, however, for when I got inside, we all went into the living room and sat down. I told them in plain and simple language what I intended doing. To my utter amazement, they were both overjoyed. My father said that there was no better government position than the army and my mother almost cried she was so glad that I would be a doctor after all.

This incident taught me a lesson that I will never forget. Never underestimate the understanding of another human being.

A WISH COME TRUE

"I tell you, John, that my daughter Alice, is going to enter Nurse's training in the fall, and that is final," snapped Mrs. Johnson at her obstinate husband.

"Listen here, Mildred, she is just as much my daughter as she is yours, and I say that she is going to go to Business College," he retorted. "She has the qualifications of an excellent secretary: she is reliable efficient, intelligent, and has a natural liking for people."

efficient, intelligent, and has a natural liking for people."

"All the more reason for her to be a nurse," Mildred snapped.

Just at this crucial moment, Alice entered the room and, looking from her mother to her father, she concluded that the topic under discussion had been her future. Alice stood in the middle of the room bewildered. She knew that next fall, after graduating, she would either be entering the Business College in Springbank, or beginning to train for a nurse.

If she told her father she detested typing and doing office work, he would be hurt, and, worst of all, she would end up washing people's faces, and making beds all of her life. Little did Alice's parents know that her secret ambition was to be a social worker. She longed to be able to help people and be of some service to her community. Alice, however, was a very obedient girl, and did everything her parents wished.

The following day, as Alice was walking home from school, she was deep in thought about how she could get her wish to come true, when she stepped into the path of an oncoming vehicle. The crash was the last thing she remembered hearing.

The spotless, white room was silent. Finally a faint sob was heard outside the door of room 326. Dr. Kemper had just informed Alice's parents that there wasn't much chance for their daughter, for Alice had no desire to help herself get better.

The door clicked. The still limp form didn't move Alice's eyes seemed glued to the ceiling.

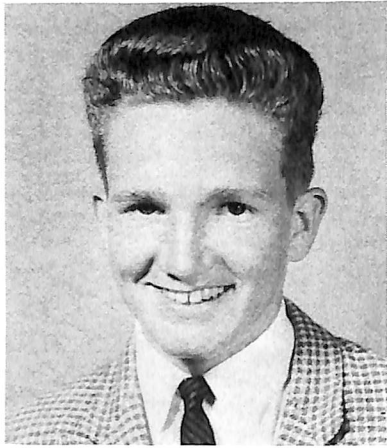

"Alice, dear," her mother whispered, "If you'll only try to get well and help yourself, your father and I will try our best to make your fondest dream come true." "I know we've never let you do what you've wanted to do, and we've always made your decisions for you, but please give us another chance."

As the parents left the darkening room, they failed to observe Alice as she looked up and breathed, "Thank you."

A few years later, the headlines of the local newspaper read: "Social Worker in Springbank, Miss Alice Forbes proves to be the greatest friend to teenagers."

ACTIVITY REPORTS

OUR SOCCER TEAM

This, being the first year of St. Clair Secondary School, the Athletic teams were thought not to have much chance for success, for this was the first year the boys had played together. Other teams had the distinct advantage of having played together at least one year previous to this season. This was true of the soccer team, and it was shown in pre-season practice and in the early part of the season.

Having only a cow field to practise in, and not much of a cow field at that, didn't make the situation any better. Practice was held regularly every night from three o'clock to five. Various drills and plays were emphasized by the coach and also the principal gave a pep talk when he could spare a few minutes.

As the season dragged through, the team was better than had been expected. By the end of the season we had accumulated six points which was good enough for a third place tie. The student body should be duly proud of this strong team effort.

THE LIBRARY CLUB

The Library Club is one of St. Clair's busiest Clubs. Because of the concerted efforts of its thirty members, the library had enough books prepared to open at least a month before it was thought possible. It was they who recorded the books as they arrived, who did the typing on the book, cards and pockets, who pasted the pockets into the books, and who finally gave the books their bright look by covering them with shiny plastic covers. To go through each of those processes for each of the 1008 books in the library seemed, last September, almost impossible. But with persistence, care and good cheer, that work in his use of the library.

has been done. The members from the commercial courses have, in addition, been typing the catalogue cards which, when completed, will assist every student

After the library opening, the club undertook to be responsible each afternoon for the circulation of books. It is no exaggeration to say that the library could not function without the library club.

I. S. C. F.

"To know Christ, and to make Him known." This is the aim of the Inter-School Christian Fellowship which is an inter-denominational club.

The school year has been highlighted by dialogues, discussion groups, and special speakers.

Eleven club members attended the Post Urbana Conference on the weekend of February 9 in the Knox Presbyterian Church in Toronto.

All of the social events in connection with the club activities have been a source of good fun enjoyed by all. The "Jumping Jimminy Party" was a jumping success, and the Gym Party was featured by sixty-five students consuming nine dozen doughnuts in a matter of a few seconds.

The Christmas Assembly depicted the Birth of Christ in story and song, and at the Easter Assembly

Rev. Roy Lawson spoke reminding us all that, "He is risen" as He said!

The Spring Conference at Lamrecton Camp put a crowning touch to the I. S. C. F. program when a large group of students spent a glorious weekend on the shores of Lake Huron with students from the surrounding cities. The theme was "How practical are you?" with the guest speaker being Dr. H. Savage. The discussion groups, singing sports, good eating and fellowship were features long to be remembered.

We will be looking for you at I. S. C. F. next year.

STUDENTS' COUNCIL

This year, being St. Clair's initial one, brought many challenges to the Student Body. It didn't take long for the Students' Council to form after holding the election for the executives and almost immediately the council was ready to take on the responsibilities that meant so much to St. Clair's future.

Under the capable direction of President Dave Butcher, the council worked in various committees with help from Miss Churchill and Mr. Palmer, council advisors.

Perhaps one of the most essential organizations in the school, St. Clair's first Students' Council laid a solid foundation for the following councils to build on.

Much time, work, and planning went into the many projects that the council undertook. However, the results were well worth the effort. A sound constitution was drawn up, dances were sponsored, St. Clair News appeared in the newspaper, dress-up days and record hops were held, buttons and ribbons were sold and many other activities were carried out to provide school spirit and add as much enjoyment for the students as possible.

The council is commended for a job well done.

Lily Miller C-11

BASKETBALL

Although the St. Clair Junior Basketball team failed to win the conference championship, this does not mean it had an unsuccessful season.

The team ended the regular schedule in a deadlock with St. Pats for third place. This made a sudden death play-off game necessary. The team then came through in fine fashion to defeat the fighting Irish and move into the semi final game with S.C.I. T.S.

This contest proved exciting all the way. Even though it was played at Central, the majority of the fans were from St. Clair. In the opening minutes of the game the S.C.I.T.S. boys put on a sudden rush and took an early, commanding lead. Not to be outdone St. Clair came fighting back and managed to take a one point lead at half time. The teams matched baskets for most of the last half. With only 30 seconds left the S.C.I.T.S. team broke a 30-30 tie to win the game 32-30 and advanced to the finals.

The team, as well as the Student Body, sincerely appreciates the interest and leadership given by their coach, Mr. Pearce.
